President Freedman. "There may be rivals at the start, but it is hardly to be expected that these will survive. They have no stamina and will not be able to face a losing season or even a few weeks of serious loss.

"Against them are the backers of teams who have uncomplainingly suffered loss season after season and who are willing to incur still further loss, seeking only to provide the best game that mopey can procure. It is a fact that, money that has been made in the National League for several seasons that been the profits of the players themselves.

This is a matter which anybody who knows a ball player does not have to think twice over in order to grasp. The valuable players will sign where their money is certain, in preference to taking a chance at lower salaries and no assurance of a full season's work.

"At best the so-called rivals can produce only minor league baseball and none of the larger cities will accept the article: It is tempting fate for the promoters of that class of play to enter some of the cities on their schedule, if what is printed is true.

"If it gets to a fight they will find millions arrayed sgalinst their thousands. The National League is now harmonious and the game under its control may be expected to be made more attractive and to be improved far beyond its recent state. The pick of the players will remain with the National League and weak clubs will be strengthened.

"Spike" Sullivan Gained Decision in Twenty Rounds.

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 19 .- "Spike" Sullivan and Tim Kearns got their Irish up early in their twenty-round with the result that they furnished a the gong until Tim Hurst gave Sulli.

"Spike" knew every method of and sprinted around the ring at times when Kearns was trying to corner him. Sullivan used a long left jab most frequently.

Kearns's sensitive, tube-equipped nose was his mark, and he got to it regularly with an occasional wallop to the midriff and a frequent heave of the right to the head and jaw. Sullivan started the rough work early, but when Kenrus got mad he proved better at that game than "Spike." The latter was cautious and avoided punishment, while Kearns was anxious to get a chance for a knockout. He kept boring in and took many jabs and swings for his trouble. For a dozen rounds honors were easy, Kearns had floored "Spike" once and had tripped down himself. Sulivan's steady work told as the bout drew to its close, and several times it looked squally for Tim. for Tim.

He was dropped twice from a right to the body and a left to the Jaw and was saved once by the gong.

Sullivan had the better of all the closing rounds and Hurst's decision met approval. Both men finished tired, with tips and ears split and faces puffed, but they had furnished one of the best fights ever seen here.
